

A WORD ABOUT CLOTHING...

Aside from location or background the clothing you choose will determine the "look" of your photograph. Choosing the right clothing can be made more complicated when more than one person is photographed. Two things should be kept in mind when selecting what you will wear: key (are the clothes light or dark) and hue (the color). Generally speaking, clothes for a group should be of the same key and hue. Long sleeves often work best and solid colors eliminate the problem of competing patterns. By giving some thought to how the group will look as a whole, the end result will be a pleasing photograph that draws attention to the faces. If you have further questions about clothing selection, we would be happy to consult with you.

REORDERS...

Forget to order a print for someone? That's no problem because we archive our digital files. Simply give us the number from the back of the print from which you want additional copies. Feel free to order additional prints at any time. A small handling charge will be added to you order.

ABOUT THE PHOTOGRAPHER...

My love of photography started as a child and even after twenty-five years as a working professional, the process of creating a photograph still captivates me. With a background in fine arts, I try to draw on a variety of sources for inspiration to achieve a style that is uniquely my own: a blend of sophistication and fun! My goal is not only to capture an image of people at their best, but to make the whole photographic session an enjoyable experience.
